The Mithila Sourcing Story

---

Makhana — the fox nut — grows in the still wetland ponds of Mithila, in Bihar's Madhubani district. This region produces the majority of India's foxnut crop, harvested and hand-popped through techniques refined over generations.

FNW works directly with farmers in this belt, moving the crop from pond to processing floor with minimal handling — preserving the size, whiteness and crunch that define a truly premium makhana.

Manufacturing & Quality Process

---

Raw foxnuts sourced directly from Mithila farmers, ensuring traceability from pond to plant.

2

Machine Cleaning

Foreign matter, husk and dust removed through mechanised cleaning lines.

3

4

Moisture Control

Moisture levels controlled to protect crunch and extend shelf life during transit and storage.

5
